Nature of the Course
This seminar explores de la Garza's theoretical construct of "Mindful Heresy" through a thorough exploration of related concepts and theories, with an emphasis on engaged praxis and poiesis. Mindful Heresy is offered as the conscious violation of the orthodoxies of esteemed groups to whom an individual feels loyalty and through whom they attribute significant aspects of their social identities. Students are expected to read broadly, write occasional short essays as required, participate in class discussions and activities, and complete one final project (may be a joint endeavor), a final essay, and write a final performative poetic collection of verse for public performance.

Seminar Assistants:
This course will have two seminar assistants who will be working closely with the professor to prepare class materials, lectures/discussions, and activities. Seminar assistants may be consulted for creative or conceptual exploration on assignments, but all communications will be shared with the professor. Seminar Assistants are not authorized to alter or adapt class requirements and are not to be consulted regarding grading of assignments. They are not able to access your evaluations or grades due to FERPA guidelines.

Required Readings:
Required texts for this class have been ordered through Follett bookstore or will be made available via course folders on Canvas or by hard copy from the professor. Please see schedule following this syllabus to identify the class dates for readings required. Students are expected to do the reading for the class.

Course Assignments:
All course assignments will be provided under the Canvas Assignments tab as made available by Dr. de la Garza.

Short Essays. Three short essays will be written during the course of the semester, in response to a prompt provided in class and related to the assigned readings during the time immediately preceding the essay due date. Each essay is worth 10 points, for a total of 30 points.

Course Project. Students will prepare a project that will be presented to the class in a 15-20 minute time frame during the final class meetings. The project is an applied praxis of Mindful Heresy and may be selected from an array of genres (i.e., graphic novel, scripted short play, publicly broadcast podcast, conceptual art installation, children’s book, etc.) to be discussed in class. Course projects may be collaborative projects with other classmates. Each project must have a brief written concept paper (250-500 words) which will be submitted by March 17, immediately following spring break. Course project is worth 50 points; Concept paper is worth 10 points; for a total of 60 points.

Final Paper. Students will write a conceptual paper interrogating an aspect of the construct of mindful heresy. These papers are due on April 28. Each student will negotiate with Dr. de la Garza the theme/topic of the paper they will write. Papers may be collaboratively written if there is a strong case for co-authorship. Papers will be written in a format/style suitable for submission to a conference or journal and must use either APA or Chicago style. Final paper is worth 75 points.

Poiesis/Journal. Students will keep a journal over the course of the semester for reflections and jottings regarding thoughts and insights that are “new” to them, that did not “exist” before consideration of ideas from readings or course discussions and assignments. Entries should be made each week of the semester. Will be submitted with the final exam. This is not a personal journal. Journal with evidence of thoughtful consideration and reflection in entries: 75 points

Final Poiesis/Exam. Students will use their poiesis journal over the course of the semester to inspire the writing of a poetic text (or texts) which will be read aloud during the final exam time slot. A 100-200 word written reflection on poiesis, along with the poetic texts will be due on the date of the final exam. Poiesis assignment is worth 100 points total.

Grading

Grades will be kept on Canvas and computed according to the percentages calculated therein for grades using the standard ASU grading scale. Grades will be manually submitted after completion of the final exam. There is no extra credit for the course.
